THE MORNING STAR, THE OLDEST DAILY NEWSPAPER IN NORTH CAROLINA.

The Only Six-Dollar Daily of its Class in the State.

Ex-Governor Hoard, of Wisconsin, one of the leading dairymen of the northwest, says he wouldn't keep a cow that wouldn't bring him a profit of $50 a year with butter at 20 cents a pound. If cows can do that well in Wisconsin where they have to be housed and handfed for nearly half the year, they ought to do much better in the South, where they have free range all the year.

Frank Melbourne, the rain persuader, who made a fortune out West bringing rain for the confiding farmers, says it is a humbug, and that he didn't know any more about making rain come than anybody else. He took care, however, not to indulge in these remarks until there was a respectable distance between him and the arid region.

There is one town in America where there are offices enough to go around. Chairman Berry, of the Kentucky Democratic Convention, drank a glass of whiskey on the stage amid tumultuous applause. Kentucky whiskey has brought down many a sovereign, but this public recognition of Kentucky's favorite liquid brought down the house.

BASE BALL.

High Point Beats Wilmington—Score Ten to Three—Games to be Played To-Day at Hilton Park and the Hammocks.

A large crowd of spectators visited Hilton Park yesterday to witness the game between the High Point team and the Wilmington club. The score was ten to three in favor of High Point, Furlong, Zellars and Watson played good ball. Rankin proved himself an excellent fielder. Hauser was in the box for the visitors and pitched strong ball, striking out 15 of our weak batters. Wilson, Wilmington's pitch, is first-class, but the support was poor. To-day it will be very good.

The High Pointers played good ball. Armfield as first base, Watson second base, and Ragsdale short-stop, are away above the average, and King, catch, is complimented on all sides as the best ever in Wilmington. To-day Wilmington will play good ball; the first game at Hilton Park at ten o'clock and the second game at the Hammocks at 4 p. m. The following are the teams which play to-day:

King, catch; Strayhorn, pitch; Armfield, first base; Watson, second base; Jones, third base; Ragsdale, short stop; Bailey, left field; Davis, centre field; Griffith, right field, Hauser, substitute.

Manager Roberts says to-day's game will be the best that will be played.

Zellars and Pearsall will be a great addition to Wilmington's team, and Wilson, supported by Zellars, in the afternoon, will show all lovers of good ball what a battery can do. In yesterday's game High Point only got four hits off of Wilson, and he will be at his best, supported by Zellars.

Fitness for the position. 2. Previous record for faithful service. 3. Length of such service. These three conditions are as wise as Jefferson's test for office: "Is he fit; is he honest; is he capable?"

NEWS FROM RALEIGH.

WAKE AND OTHER COUNTIES TO HAVE ELECTIONS IN NOVEMBER

The Work of the Fred Douglass Legislature—Naval Reserves—The Government's Appropriation For the State Guard—Odd Fellows' Excursion—The Tax on Druggists.

[Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., July 3.

It is now discovered that Wake county is to have an election in November. An act passed the recent Legislature which says it shall be the duty of the Board of Commissioners of Jones, Hyde, Wake, Polk and Pamlico counties to order an election on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1895, to ascertain the approval or disapproval of the voters in said counties of the adoption of a system of working the public roads by taxation. If a majority of the voters vote "for adoption of said law" the sheriff is directed to levy a tax of not more than 45 cents upon the poll and not more than 15 cents on the $100 worth of taxable property. The money to be expended in working the roads, employing work house hands and prisoners in jail. A superintendent to have charge of improving roads is one of the probabilities included in the act. Think of placing a county like Wake in such company. But our negro and Populist representatives did many things which the Wake county people dislike. The act has for some reason been kept in the background.

Your correspondent learns that Naval Reserves will be organized in Kinston and Elizabeth City. The equipments which were used by the Charlotte and Newbern divisions of Reserves before they disbanded will be transferred to Kinston and Elizabeth City. The Gatling gun which was used by the Charlotte division of Reserves will be turned over to the Queen City Guards. The Guards will organize a Gatling gun battery at once.

The Government appropriation of something over $9,000 was placed to the credit of the State Guard on July 1st. This is North Carolina's share of the $400,000 appropriated the General Government. The apportionment of North Carolina's amount to the various organizations in the State has been completed. Each company will receive $200.

The Quartermaster General is receiving supplies daily from the Government on requisitions for 1894. These supplies had never been asked for until the State failed to make an appropriation to the Guard.

The trial of W. D. Brown for cutting Ed. Haley was postponed this morning until Monday, Haley not being able to appear.

The triple link excursion to Norfolk, which is operated by the Capitol Lodge, I. O. O. F., left to-day via the Southern with a large crowd. They expect to take a good many on the route.

Deputy Collector Gibson telegraphed this morning to the Revenue Department that he had captured a monster still in Bladen county, and 2,000 gallons of beer. The supposed owner is Barhan Jones, an old offender.

Certain druggists of the city sent a petition to the County Commissioners requesting them not to collect the 2 per cent. tax imposed on them by the Legislature. Mr. Jones, attorney for Commissioners, replied that the law was already being enforced in respect to the 2 per cent. additional, and that they could only enforce the law. It is probable that the druggists will make a test of the matter in court.

Attorney T. R. Purnell for the Arrington Court, and who failed to get his $40 fee, says Treasurer Worth should in addition to State Treasurer, be made Auditor and the Chief Judiciary—Supreme Court.

Two more druggists took out whiskey license, making 16 in all, who have license. Fusionists expected $50,000 by this act and they got $800.

Farmers are cutting oats and laying by corn.

A MORNING BATTLE.

A New Departure—Fitzsimmons and Corbett Will Have Their Dispute in the Forenoon.

DALLAS, TEX., June 30.—These are busy days at the headquarters of the Florida Athletic Club, where President Dan A. Stuart and Secretary W. K. Wheeler are arranging the preliminaries for the great glove contest. President Stuart said to-day:

"We have not yet decided on the site for the auditorium. Its seating capacity will be 40,000, and we anticipate a very large attendance. Work on the building will begin July 10, but the diagrams and reserved sections will be out next week.

"It has been decided that the contest shall take place on the morning of October 31st between the hours of 10 and 12 o'clock. This may be an innovation, but the contest will take place in the forenoon. Men are in better humor in the morning. The cost will be less, and all things considered it is for the best. It will all be over, including the applause, by dinner time and hence will not interfere in any way with other events under other management.

"For referee I would prefer Prof. John Duffy, of New Orleans, or George Siler, of Chicago. They are fair, upright and experienced men, in whom the public has confidence. However, the referee has not been decided upon."

State Comptroller R. W. Finley has issued to Stuart his receipt for the $500 required for a fight between man and man in Texas. Stuart has the license in his pocket and will carry out his contract at this end of the line.

THE CAROLINA MUTUAL

Fire Insurance Company, of Charlotte, N. C.

The CAROLINA MUTUAL is a strong NORTH CAROLINA Company. It is, however, a stock company, and issues absolutely non-participating and non-assessable policies. Its mutual feature consists in a charter provision, that one-third of its directors must be POLICYHOLDERS who are NOT stockholders elected by the POLICYHOLDERS; this is a very strong point, the policy-holders who have great interests at stake, have a share in the management of the Company, and will always know its condition. Better than this, the CAROLINA MUTUAL deposits all premiums received at this agency to their credit with the WILMINGTON SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY. This makes it practically a local company. The directors of the company are:

P. M. BROWN,
Of Brown, Weddington & Co., Wholesale Hardware.
E. B. SPRINGS,
Of E. B. Springs & Co., Fertilizers and Wagons.
M. P. PEGRAM,

J. T. ANTHONY,

JOHN W. MILLER,

HERIOT CLARKSON,
Of Clarkson & Duls, Att'ys-at-Law.

These gentlemen stand among the wealthiest and most successful business men of North Carolina, and their names are a guarantee of the Company's honesty, conservatism and success. We heartily recommend the Company to the property owners of Wilmington. We also represent other good companies, and do a general insurance business. Come to see us.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 4, 1895

IT MUST BE WITHIN THE LINES.

There are some free silver Democrats and some anti-free silver Democrats who have permitted themselves to be carried so far by their feeling for the side of the question they espouse as to declare that if the next Democratic convention adopt a platform which does not meet with their approbation they will refuse to stand on it and will support the ticket of that party which comes nearest meeting their views. That's the way a good many talk now, and while some do not mean it there are doubtless some who do.

Whatever the free silver Democrats might do we have not the slightest doubt that under present conditions there are a good many anti-free silver, or more properly speaking anti-silver Democrats who would rather support the Republican party on what they call a "sound money" platform than support the Democratic party on a free silver platform. On the matter of the currency there is very little difference between the Eastern Democrat and the Eastern Republican, as was clearly shown in the last Congress when the bill for the free coinage of the silver seignorage, and the Carlisle banking bill were under discussion. Neither of those bills got any substantial support from the East but a great deal of opposition. the opposition coming from the Representatives of both parties. In fact the most outspoken gold advocate on either side was a Democrat, the Hon. Bourke Cockran, whose devotion to gold didn't save him in the general wreck in the succeeding election.

We cannot, from what we have seen and read since the present agitation for free silver began, refuse to believe that there is a very considerable percentage of Democrats in the East who under present conditions subordinate their Democracy to their ideas on the money question, and would not hesitate to renounce their allegiance to the party if it proclaimed for free silver, just as many of them knifed Seymour in 1868, when the National Convention inserted a plank in its platform hostile to national banks.

We do not think it would be any use to appeal to that kind of men to stand by the party in the event it failed to adopt a platform to suit them for their minds are engrossed with dollars and they will go with the party which will stand by their dollars, and viewing it simply from the standpoint of dollars they would be doing the sensible thing, for gold monometallism stands a much better chance with the Republican party, and the way to make that thing sure is to keep the Republican party alive and restore it to power. With the Republican party in power and firmly entrenched that will be not only the last of free coinage but the last of the silver dollar, which it will get out of the way as fast as possible.

If the Republican leaders were sure now of carrying States enough to win without the vote of any of the silver States, they would end the game of mum which they have been playing and at once pronounce for gold monometallism. It is the doubt about this that keeps them mum now or makes them straddle when they do speak.

Every blow that has been struck by any party at silver in this country has been by the Republican party, and every point gained for silver since the fight against it began has been through the agency of the Democratic party, and, therefore, no true friend of silver who calls himself a Democrat can, without acting illogically, go outside of the Democratic lines to fight its battles, and it would be the extreme of folly to do it now while the Republican party stands together, ready to avail itself of any dissensions that may arise in the Democratic party.

A divided Democratic party means a successful Republican party, for even with a united Democratic party the issue is always doubtful, and generally hinges on a few "pivotal" States, and unfortunately these pivotal States are now more in sympathy on this question with the Republican party than they are with the free silver wing of the Democratic party. A divided Democracy would mean two Democratic tickets, one Republican ticket and a Populist ticket, in which event, as we have intimated above, many of the gold monometallist Democrats of the East, hopeless of electing their ticket, would vote for the Republican candidates, while possibly some of the free silver Republicans of the West might vote for the free silver Democratic candidates; but with the several tickets there would be little chance for an election by the people, which would ensure the election of the Republican candidates when the election went into the House of Representatives, and that would be the end of the free silver effort for at least four years more. The only hope for free silver is in free silver Democrats standing together and fighting it out within the party lines, and keeping up the fight until they carry the party with them. That's the way the tariff reformers won at last, and that's the way free silver will win.

MINOR MENTION.

Out of a list of thirty-three industries pursued in the State of Florida, as given by the Jacksonville Citizen, the saw mills lead with 168, others ranging from one up to 91. Of course saw mills are necessary, but the preponderance of them here indicates that the tree slayer is abroad in Florida, and that the axe is doing its work there as it is doing it in some of the other Southern States, where the lumberman, eager for gain, and regardless of the future, has secured a foothold. Florida is liberally supplied with timber, and her forests could doubtless stand the slashing of many axes and the ripping of the saws for some time without showing it much, but the probabilities are that the number of mills will increase rather than decrease, as the lumber area continues to contract in other sections, and the facilities for moving the lumber to shipping points improve. If discriminating judgment were shown in the felling of trees the business might be carried on extensively without doing serious harm, but this is seldom the case for the lumbermen generally cut everything fit for the saw and leave nothing but the stumps to mark the field of their operations. There may be profit in this for the cutters, but it is bad for the States, every one of which that have not should have laws regulating the cutting when done for commercial purposes, and see them strictly enforced.

***

Governor Altgeld, of Illinois, doesn't seem to believe in the feasibility of a ship canal from Lake Michigan by the way of the Mississippi river to the Gulf, and has therefore vetoed a bill passed by the last Legislature appropriating $25,000 for a survey of the Desplaines and Illinois rivers. He argues that it would be money thrown away, even if the State had a right to appropriate money for such purpose, which he denies, and contends that to make the canal accomplish the purpose for which it is intended would necessitate the deepening of the channel of the Illinois river and of the Mississippi from the mouth of the Illinois river below Cairo, and even then for much of the year the rivers would not be navigable for vessels drawing more than fourteen feet of water. It is a gigantic enterprise, he says, which would involve the expenditure of many millions of dollars more than the estimates, and, if undertaken at all, it should be under the auspices and at the expense of the Federal Government. In the meantime the canal company is pegging away, with apparently no doubt of the feasibility of the scheme and of their ability to complete it within the next few years. They have already spent about $10,000,000 on it, and that's too much to sink in the ground and quit.

The Tiffin, Ohio, woollen mills are so crowded with orders that they are making arrangements to run day and night. The number of operators will be doubled and wages increased. This is in the State of Hon. Wm. McKinley and Hon. Columbus Delano, the former of whom predicted all manner of disaster as a result of reducing his tariff, and the latter of whom was so impressed with the gloomy outlook for the American wool growers, that about the only thing left for them to do was to slaughter their sheep and get out or the sheep raising business. It is hard on Messrs. McKinley and Delano, as prophets of disaster, that the woollen mills even in their own State should be humming along, busier than they have been for several years, and that both wool and sheep are advancing in price. Wool has gone up a cent a pound in the past few weeks and is now higher than it was before it was put on the free list, and the price of sheep has gone up a dollar a head in Wisconsin. This doesn't look as if woollen manufacturing had been injured by the reduction of the tariff rates, or as if wool growing had been knocked out by placing wool on the free list. But it does look as if with the increased activity in the mills, increased wages and improving prices all along the line, under the new tariff, that Messrs. McKinley, Delano & Co. would be knocked out.

The machinery at Niagara Falls electric power works was tried the other day by connecting with a factory about three-quarters of a mile distant and it worked nicely. The question as to the distance at which the power can be utilized remains to be seen, but Nicola Tesla says the distance is practically unlimited, and we have a pretty large sized faith in anything Nic says on the subject of electricity.

HEART DISEASE, like many other ailments when they have taken hold of the system, never gets better of its own accord, but Constantly grows worse. There are thousands who know they have a defective heart, but will not admit the fact. They don't want their friends to worry, and Don't know what to take for it, as they have been told time and again that heart disease was incurable. Such was the case of Mr. Silas Farley of Dyesville, Ohio who writes June 19, 1894, as follows:

"I had heart disease for 23 years, my heart hurting me almost continually. The first 15 years I doctored all the time, trying several physicians and remedies, until my last doctor told me it was only a question of time as I could not be cured. I gradually grew worse, very weak, and completely discouraged, until I lived, propped half up in bed, because I couldn't lie down nor sit up. Thinking my time had come I told my family what I wanted done when I was gone. But on the first day of March on the recommendation of Mrs. Fannie Jones, of Anderson, Ind., I commenced taking Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart and wonderful to tell, in ten days I was working at light work and on March 19 commenced framing a barn, which is heavy work, and I have'nt lost a day since. I am 66 years old, 6 ft. 4½ inches and weigh 250lbs. I believe I am fully cured, and I am now only anxious that everyone shall know of your wonderful remedies."

WAS A PHILOSOPHER.

A BEGGAR STUDENT OF HUMAN NATURE WHO HAD A SYSTEM.

Mendicancy Carried Out Upon Practical Lines—Why He Avoided the Rich—Stood Outside a Restaurant, but Never Begged From a Hungry Looking Man.

He was a wretched looking chap, so thinly clad that he was really an object of pity. He had sought a secluded corner at the entrance of a cheap restaurant near Herald square, and for awhile it seemed as if he had chosen the spot merely to escape the chilling blasts of the cutting wind. Many men passed into the place, but he spoke to none. Finally one who had just completed his meal came forth. The man started forward, hesitated a moment and then resumed his former position. Soon another man, apparently in a great hurry, came from the restaurant, buttoning his coat as he walked. In a moment the poor fellow stood in the way and barely had he uttered his request for help when he was rewarded with a dime.

A moment later a group of young men in very high spirits passed into the restaurant. To an ordinary student they would have been just the right men to approach for alms, but the beggar saw them not. It was only to certain men returning to the street that he made himself known. It was but the work of a moment to pick an acquaintance with the fellow, and when he found I was interested he talked freely of his plan.

"I had to do a good deal of thinking about it when I first started in," he said. "I can't get work now, and when I have work I can only keep at it for a little while on account of rheumatism. When I saw I had to beg, I thought I might as well do it right or not at all. If you know anything about men's faces and clothes, you don't have to do any guesswork at all. I can tell long before I get near a man what my chances are with him, and if I don't think that it's ten to one I will get something I don't try him, for there's no good in wearing yourself out and getting common. Some fellows go along the street and try to touch every well dressed man they meet. They couldn't do anything worse, for everybody sees what they're doing and knows they are professionals and steers clear of them. The only time to go up against well dressed men as a straight thing, without regard to their faces, is when they are full and feeling happy over it.

"The average well dressed man or woman is the hardest kind of a person to hit. They do lots for charity, but it's in a different way—societies, schools for kids, kindergartens and missions—and they think they are doing enough. If any one hits them on the street, they put them down for a professional. You have got to judge the well dressed people by their faces and general manner and let their clothes count for nothing.

"Whenever I have to do any street work, I always select the people of the lower middle classes, who don't put on any front—women especially. I mean people who live comfortably, but haven't got any too much money to spare. Say, you may think I'm stringing you, but I would rather have one nickel from one of them than a quarter from a fellow who could stand it and had it to burn. Funny, but I feel just as sentimental about that sometimes as if I was earning it, and I would earn it if I had the chance.

"Now, you take this stand of mine here today. There's three men who gave me something—two nickels and a dime. I have been here half an hour and I've only struck five men. I missed two. Well, three out of five don't look like bad guesswork, if you want to call it so, does it? This is the cheapest restaurant in the neighborhood. There's the Imperial, Marlborough and all the other big hotel restaurants I could have taken, but I'll bet I wouldn't have got a thing from the people who came from any of them. The men who go in here don't pay over 25 or 30 cents for what they eat, and I'm willing to take my chances with them right along.

"I always wait till a man comes out. Some people think it ought to be the other way, for the reason that a man who was hungry would be more apt to give out of sympathy for the man who was hitting him for money for something to eat. But I didn't figure it out that way. You see, these are pretty hard times, and there's more people in hard luck than there ever was before. Now, it's bad enough to be in hard luck, but it's worse yet to be hungry, and when a man is up against both games little things will bother him that wouldn't affect him at all if he had his stomach full. I reason that pretty nearly every man who comes in here is either in hard luck or else he is a miser who don't want to spend any more than is actually necessary. If it wasn't so, you know they would all go to the big restaurants in the hotels, for you know as well as I do that the right kind of a man likes good things to eat and nice clean service if he can afford it.

"Well, I am onto the misers, and I leave them alone. When the decent man comes out, he feels better for having had his dinner. He is ready for business, and life is a great deal brighter to him than it was half an hour before. I ask him to help me. He says to himself: 'Well, I feel pretty good. This fellow is in worse luck than I am. I know what it is to feel hungry. I won't miss the nickel very much,' and then I get it. When he hands it to me, he feels better for it, and he looks it, too, and if he has been doing things that are not quite up to the limit he consoles himself with the fact that he ain't such a bad fellow after all. And he ain't either. So you see there's two of us happy, and if there was more of it the world would be happier. Thanks, boss."

Then the philosopher went in to dinner.—New York Herald.

Lord Clive was thin and keen faced. He had the appearance of a man always worn down by lack of food and rest.

What and Where Is Heaven?

Alger says that "heaven" is not distinctively a world situated somewhere in immensity, but that it is "a state of pure spiritual existence, having nothing to do with any special time or place." He further says that "heaven is a state of the soul or a state of society under the rule of God's will, either in this life or in a future state of existence." From the above it is clear that the great authority therein quoted considered that "heaven" does not mean a bounded place of abode, but simply unlimited existence in a state of joy for the souls of virtuous respecters of God's laws.—St. Louis Republic.

A Bar to Bigamy.

"Boys," said a teacher in a Sunday school, "can any of you quote a verse from Scripture to prove that it is wrong for a man to have two wives?" He paused, and after a moment or two a bright boy raised his hand. "Well, Thomas," said the teacher encouragingly. Thomas stood up and said, "No man can serve two masters." The question ended there.—Boston Home Journal.

Placating the Bridegroom.

Mr. Newman (tearfully)—Maud, I'm sure you don't love me as you used to. We've been married only two months, yet you've bolted your dinner to hurry away to the Municipal Protective league.

Mrs. Newman—Hush, Willie. Your tears quite unwoman me, dear. Be a good, brave little husband, and I'll hurry home and bring you a lovely box of cigarettes.—New York Herald.

VERNE ON ENGLISH AUTHORS.

"M. Jules Verne at Home" is the title of an interview by Miss Belloc in The Strand Magazine. Among other interesting details about the veteran French author are the following concerning his taste for English writers:

"All my life I have delighted in the works of Sir Walter Scott, and during a never to be forgotten tour in the British isles my happiest days were spent in Scotland. I still see, as in a vision, beautiful picturesque Edinburgh, with its Heart of Midlothian, and many entrancing memories; the Highlands, world forgotten Iona and the wild Hebrides. Of course to one familiar with the works of Scott, there is scarce a district of his native land lacking some association connected with the writer and his immortal work."

London had always impressed M. Jules Verne. He considers himself "a regular devotee of the Thames." He was asked what he thought of English books of adventure, a species in literature in which England claims to have led the van.

"Yes, indeed," replied he, "notably with that classic, beloved alike by old and young, 'Robinson Crusoe,' and yet perhaps I shall shock you by admitting that I myself prefer the dear old 'Swiss Family Robinson.' People forget that Crusoe and his man Friday were but an episode in a seven volumed story. To my mind the book's great merit is that it was apparently the first romance of the kind ever perpetrated. We have all written 'Robinsons,'" he added laughing, "but it is a moot question if any of them would have seen the light had it not been for their famous prototype. Unhappily I can read only those works which have been translated into French. I never tire of Fenimore Cooper. Certainly his romances deserve true immortality, and will, I trust, be remembered long after the so called literary giants of a later age are forgotten. Then, again, I thoroughly enjoy Captain Marryat's breezy romances.

"Owing to my unfortunate inability to read English, I am not so familiar as I should like to be with Mayne Reid and Robert Louis Stevenson. Still, I was greatly delighted with the latter's 'Treasure Island,' of which I possess a translation. It seemed to me, when I read it, to possess extraordinary freshness of style and enormous power. "I have not mentioned," he continued, "the English writer whom I consider the master of them all—namely, Charles Dickens"—and the face of the king of story tellers lit up with youthful enthusiasm. "I consider that the author of 'Nicholas Nickleby,' 'David Copperfield' and 'The Cricket on the Hearth' possesses pathos, humor, incident, plot and descriptive power any one of which might have made the reputation of a less gifted mortal."

Easter.

The observance of Easter is connected with the history of Christianity itself. And while there has never been any difference of opinion among Christians as to the general observance of the festival, in the early church the Asiatics kept the feast on the day of the Jewish Passover, while the western Christians observed it on the first Sunday after the Passover.

Hence arose a great dispute in the second century, and Victor, the bishop of Rome, excommunicated those churches which did not keep it on the Sunday. The controversy was brought before the Council of Nice in the year A. D. 325, and it was decreed that Easter day should be kept on the Sunday following the Jewish feast of the Passover, which Passover is kept on the fourteenth day of the Jewish month Nisan. At the same time, to prevent all uncertainty, it was made a rule of the church that the full moon next to the vernal or spring equinox should be taken for the full moon in the month Nisan, and the 21st of March be accounted the vernal equinox. Consequently Easter day is always the Sunday following the full moon which falls on or is next after the 21st day of March.

The day is still known as Pascha in the eastern church, as well as in the various churches in Europe, the English title of Easter being probably derived from the old Saxon word "Oster," Spring. Some scholars have suggested that it had its origin in the word Eastre, the name given to the Anglo-Saxon goddess of the dawn. For the church took the pagan philosophy and made it the buckler of faith against the heathen. She took the pagan Sunday and made it the Christian Sunday. And she took the pagan Eastre and made it the Christian Easter—Home and Country.

Crimea.

The Crimea took its name from the town of Kimri. It was called by the Greeks Kimmerikon, and at a very early date extensive Greek colonies were founded along its shores. The Argonautic expedition is believed by some historians to have been to the vicinity of the Crimea.

GEORGE IV NO GENTLEMAN.

He Said So Once, and at Another Time He Proved It.

When Lord Liverpool was forming his ministry in 1822, he thought it absolutely necessary to have Canning at the foreign office, although aware that the appointment would be obnoxious to George IV. The Duke of Wellington undertook the unpleasant task of communicating Lord Liverpool's determination.

As soon as the king knew what was wanted of him he broke out: "Arthur, it is impossible. I said, on my honor as a gentleman, he should never be one of my ministers again. I am sure you will agree with me that I cannot do what I said on my honor as a gentleman I would not do."

Another man would have been silenced, but the great soldier, always equal to an emergency, replied:

"Pardon me, sir, but I don't agree with you at all. Your majesty is not a gentleman."

The bold assertion startled the king, but the duke went on, "Your majesty is not a gentleman, but the sovereign of England, with duties to your people far above any to yourself, and these duties render it imperative that you should employ the abilities of Mr. Canning."

"Well, Arthur," said the king, drawing a long breath, "if I must, I must."

Although he did not like being told he was not a gentleman, George IV had once, at least, while regent forgotten he was one. This was when he flung a glass of wine in Colonel Hamlyn's face, with "Hamlyn, you are a blackguard!"

The insulted officer could not return the compliment without committing something like treason—it was out of the question to challenge the prince, while to let the insult pass unnoticed was equally impossible.

The colonel filled his glass and threw the contents in the face of his neighbor, saying, "His majesty's toast, pass it on!"

And they were fast friends from that evening.—New York Advertiser.

SHE NEVER MARRIED

"Auntie, will you tell me a story? The story, you know, you've promised me so often—why you never married. Do you remember, Auntie, when I was little, you used to say it was because no one had asked you? I never believed that," and the girl laughed. "Then you promised you'd tell me when I was 18, and now I am 18," and Miriam gave a tug at her skirts with all the pleased proprietorship of long dresses. "So do, auntie, dear."

"Very well, darling." Miss Daneby sighed, and Miriam drew up her chair and rested her golden head on the old lady's knee.

"Now, auntie, I'm ready," and Miss Daneby began.

"I was just about your age when I 'came out,' and for months past I had looked forward to a London season and thought my first ball would never come. But the much looked for night came at last, and, when dressed and ready to start, I thought it the happiest moment of my life, but it was nothing to what followed. The flowers, the music, the lights, the bright dresses, and the gay people wandering hither and thither, all dazzled me and put me in mind of fairyland. I did not lack partners, and danced till the small hours of the morning. Every one said I had been a success, but I paid little attention to any of their remarks. I had enjoyed myself wildly. What more could I want to make me happy? I was very, very young.

"Soon after, I met Mr. G. I remember it was almost my first dinner party, and, having sufficiently recovered myself from a fit of shyness, I looked round at my next door neighbor, and there, on my left, were two blue eyes laughing at me. He must have noticed my shyness, I fancied, and, with the pride of youth, I deeply resented it. After that I found the blue eyes nearly always smiled when they looked at me, and I got to love that smile, and even that evening I realized that only foolish 18 could take offense at such a trifle, so we laughed and made friends. All through dinner he talked to me a good deal, and I forgot my shyness and became communicative on many subjects.

"After that evening we met frequently, danced together, rode together—in fact, hardly a day passed without our meeting, till at last I began to look for him, whether in the park or at a ball or concert. At that time life was brimming over with happiness. I had no very definite idea of the future, and the present was so sweet that I preferred not thinking of a change of any sort.

"The first spot on my happiness was at one ball, where I had expected to find Mr. G., and though I was not enjoying things a bit I did not want to come away. Perversity of human nature! And only in the carriage did I confess to myself that I had staid on in the hope of his turning up late. Well, he didn't, and it was with a somewhat heavy heart I went to sleep that night, but by next morning the cloud had passed away. Were we not going to meet and ride together?

"Could his presence make any difference to my enjoyment? At first I laughed at the idea, but soon found it was not to be laughed at. Where he was, there my enjoyment was complete, but where he was not I seldom cared to stay. Naturally people began to talk about us, and, as is the way of the world, speculated as to what would come of it. If it would be a good thing or not. Well, let them talk. What cared I? I was so certain he loved me that I smiled when people told me that Lady Dallas was doing all she knew to catch him for her daughter. Poor Alice Dallas! Why, he never so much as looked at her when I was near! How soon was pride to have a fall!

"The summer was nearly over, and people began to hurry away from London. We met again in the country and spent long days together, and again people began to wonder why he did not propose. Perhaps I was the person who wondered least, for was I not sure that sooner or later he undoubtedly would? Then, one Sunday evening, we parted, to meet again the following week, but somehow that meeting never came about. In the long months that followed I remembered him as I saw him last, waving his handkerchief from the carriage window.

"Then, one day, I heard he was engaged to Alice Dallas. At first I would not believe it, but when belief was forced upon me my grief knew no bounds. Till that day I hardly realized how fond I had grown of G., and the prospect of a long life without him appalled me. I cried as if my heart would break, and then pride came to my rescue. Full of courage and firm resolve, I took up the thread of my daily life and hoped not only to hide my feelings, but to still the dull, aching pain by plunging wildly into reckless excitement. It was all very well for a bit, but the reaction was bound to come, and I discovered that I must try some other remedy.

"We met several times after the engagement was announced—as friends—and I talked and laughed as in the old days, save perhaps for a touch of bitterness, which then I had never known, and the sound of my voice seemed hollow and unreal, perhaps because tears were so near the surface. Then came the wedding and subsequent congratulations, and I was among the first to offer mine, and was it fancy that I thought the bridegroom looked at me a little wistfully and was hardly as radiant as the occasion warranted? But, then, no one thought it was a love match! Had not Alice herself given out that she did not care for him? And he? But, then, why had he taken this step?"

Miss Daneby paused, and in the now fast gathering darkness Miriam could discern a silent tear, while she herself was not unmoved.

"Auntie," said the girl, slipping her hand into the old lady's, "when people love like that, do they ever forget?"

"I don't think they ever quite forget, but time softens all grief and often leaves one the better for its mark. When I found that excitement could not heal my wound, I began, in a small way, to try to find some work to do, even if it were only helping those who were suffering around me. And when the first feeling of blank and utter loneliness had worn off I was able to settle to more regular occupation."

Miriam was silent, then slowly, as if touching on an almost sacred subject:

"Auntie, is he—are they alive?" she asked.

"Yes, dear."

"And was there some mistake?"

"That, dear, I never now think of. Only One knows, but some day we, too, shall see face to face."—Sketch.

In Want of Milk.

A good story is told of two young Englishmen traveling in Europe. They had never thoroughly mastered any of the languages commonly spoken on the continent and were particularly weak in their French, knowing that language well enough by sight, but not having a speaking acquaintance with it.

Finding themselves in a small French town one evening, they were desirous of obtaining a good cup of coffee. Knowing that cafe was coffee, and that lait was milk, they endeavored to call for a judicious mixture of the two, but their articulation was of so remarkable an order that they succeeded only in getting the coffee. Cafe au late they tried without success. Then du lay it was attempted mavalilingly. The suggestion that lait might be pronounced "light" was adopted equally in vain.

"Well, it's mighty queer we don't know enough to get a little drop of milk."

"Do you want milk?" asked the waitress, opening her mouth for the first time.

"Then why didn't you say so at first?" queried the girl as she flounced off.

SAYREVILLE'S AMAZING HUES.

Probably the most remarkable bit of color to be found within a radius of 100 miles from this city is the little hamlet of Sayreville, N. J. From an artist's point of view Sayreville is impressionistic in the nightmare sense of the word. Its surroundings are beautiful, for it stands on a little bluff overlooking a spreading marsh, through the center of which a sparkling river runs to lose itself in a rift of the faraway hills. The marsh is a dull, grayish blue, the river gives a steel blue effect, and far away the distance of the hills blends in soft gradations into the hue of the sky. In the midst of this gem of a landscape stands Sayreville, yellow in every sense of the word. It is a blasphemy in yellow set in a symphony in blue.

In the neighboring villages there is a legend as to how Sayreville became yellow. They say that when the town was first built there wasn't a painted house in it, and that one day an enterprising peddler on his notion selling rounds saw in this an opportunity for money making. He procured a large quantity of damaged paint at a nearby city, all of the paint being in various hues of yellow, from bright orange down to the dullest buff. This paint he carted to Sayreville and sold at low prices, and still with large profit to himself. Then the town set about painting itself yellow. Some of the people pooled their interests and their paints and ornamented their houses with the combination. Others ran to stripes, and having used up one tint filled in with the rest. One man tried polka dots in chrome on a background of greenish buff, with brilliant effect. When the work was done, the peddler came back with a big consignment of staring green, which the townspeople bought, and with which they painted their blinds. The result was pleasing to the Sayzevillers, but startling to such few outsiders as chanced to journey to that town.

In the course of time two householders found courage to break away from the prevailing yellowness. One repainted his house in robin's egg blue, the other tinted his a deep magenta, and now these two buildings stand out conspicuously and give just enough color tone to the village to accentuate its amazing effects in yellow.—New York Sun.

SEALING IN LABRADOR.

Late in February the Newfoundland sealing steamers break through the ice in St. John's harbor and make their way to some northern outposts, lying there until March 10, the earliest date on which the law allows them to "go to the ice." They stand out to sea until they meet the immense fields of ice from the Arctic ocean. These fields are often many square miles in extent and fairly teem with seals. A great seal hunter told me that the sea seemed suddenly converted into an ocean of seals and ice. The steamer breaks into the jam and floats with it or skirts along the edge, the crew, 200 or 300 in number, taking to the floating ice and living there for days and nights.

The young seals fatten so rapidly that sealers say you can actually see them grow while you are looking at them. The poor creatures are easily killed, a blow with the butt end of a gaff finishing them. The hunter then "sculps," or skins them, inserting a sharp knife under the fat, and with marvelous dexterity taking off the "pelt"—skin and fat together—in about a minute and a half. A party of men will "pan" their pelts—pile them up to the number of about 1,000 and thrust a gaff with the ship's flag into the pan. When there are pans enough, the steamer breaks into the ice and hauls them aboard with a donkey winch, or the men drag them to the vessel's side.

The Newfoundland seal hunters always speak of seals as "swiles," and for our word carry they say "spell." A schoolmaster who had been listening to a seal hunter's story said sneeringly:

"Swiles! How do you spell swiles?"

"We don't spell 'em," replied the hunter; "we most generally hauls 'em!"—Gustav Kobbe in St. Nicholas.

Hard and Bitter Wills.

It was remarked by a writer long ago that "there is no revenge so hard and bitter as that of an old man," and it is one of the astonishing perversities of many natures that the longer they live the harder they hug their possessions. The most disinterested affection is passed over, the most faithful and most valuable services are slightly and grudgingly rewarded. This mental and moral disease notably afflicts the richest. The Marquis d'Aligre was a singular example. His will was concocted with a special desire to disappoint and insult his relatives, friends and servants. To the first it said: "As for you, my relatives who have been so long spelling upon this fortune on which 'I had concentrated all my affections,' you are not going to touch a penny of it, and not one of you will be able to boast that you have squandered the millions which the old Marquis d'Aligre had taken so many years to hoard up."

Sir Robert Bevil, one of James I's officials, did not even spare his wife. "I give unto my wife tenne shillings in respect she took her sonnes part against me and did anymate and comfort him afterwards. These will not be forgotten." And the Earl of Stafford, who married the daughter of the Duc de Grammont, wrote: "To the worst of women, Claude Charlotte de Grammont, unfortunately my wife, guilty as she is of all crimes, I leave five and forty brass halfpence, which will buy a pullet for her supper. A better gift than her father can make her."—Westminster Review.

Two Sides to the Medal.

Everybody knows the woman who says society is such a bore. Few of us know her intimately, for, in point of fact, she does not go about much. I ran across her at a friend's house the other day and marked her languid air. The hostess was indiscreet enough to refer to it, and even the teacups shuddered with horror at the woman's reply.

"Yes," said she, "paying calls is so tiresome."

"Oh!" responded the hostess, "but think how much more tiresome it is to receive them."

A Big Fine.

A woman in Birmingham, England, was recently fined the British equivalent of $503,000 for selling stale fish. Her stock consisted of a half barrel of sprats, which are very small fish like whitebait, and by the law she had to be fined so much per fish. The magistrate, however, had the power to reduce the fine, and he knocked off $502,950.

A ROMANCE OF PRONOUNS.

It was evening, it was moonlight, it was late, and it was fair.
I was courting, I was happy, I was brave, for she was there.
She was pretty, she was blushing, she was willing to be wed—
He arrived, and he objected. He was papa, so I fled.
I returned. He was repentant. She was coaxing her mamma.
He relented, and I thanked him and forgave him—dear papa!
Then he blessed us. I was happy, while she blushed a rosy red.
He was willing. She was willing. I was willing. We were wed.

HALTED BY A MOUNTAIN LION.

A Night Adventure of Three Girls on a California Road.

We were driving from Oakland over the ridge that divides Alameda and Contra Costa counties, three girls bound for a country dance at Moraga valley, a little settlement on the Contra Costa side. It was late in January, and the night was pitch dark, but as the young rancher who drove knew every inch of the way we were not afraid.

We had made the ascent of the mountain and were driving down at a good pace when suddenly the horses stopped, reared and then swerved to one side, overturning the rockaway and landing us all in the mud on the side of the road. No one was hurt, and as we picked ourselves up, wondering in a dazed way what the trouble was about, something leaped out of the bushes, over the backs of the prostrate horses and lit in the brush on the lower side of the road. There was a fearful roar, and then we saw two great, green eyes glaring out of the darkness.

The driver had succeeded in pulling the frightened horses to their feet and righting the wagon. He ordered us to get into our seats, and handing the lines to the girl on the front seat he told her to hang on for dear life.

"It is a lion, and he'll jump in another minute," said the man.

Then, as we sat speechless from fright, the rancher drew his revolver. There was a scream unlike and more dreadful than anything I had ever heard. Then the great beast rolled a few feet in the brush and was still.

After the horses were quieted and we had regained our composure sufficiently, we jumped out of the rockaway, and, with the aid of matches, examined our game. It was a splendid young California mountain lion, measuring about four feet in length. We three girls were all very brave when we found the beast was really dead, so we helped the driver lift the carcass into the back of the wagon and then continued our trip, creating a great sensation among the young rustics at the dance when we told of our adventure. To be sure, we gave the driver credit for the actual killing, but weren't we there when it happened, and didn't we keep quiet, instead of screaming as lots of girls would have done?—New York Sun.

LOSS OF THE PRESIDENT.

What a strange story is that communicated by the Duke of Newcastle to The Globe concerning the loss of the President! He says that a trustworthy informant in the United States assured him that a sailor, dying in an American port, had confessed to having formed one of the crew of a pirate vessel which captured the great steamship. "Every soul on board was made to walk the plank, and the ship was scuttled."

The story seems incredible, yet it may be true, and the possibility of it gives one quite a shock. It is 50 years ago and more since the President disappeared from human sight, without, I believe, leaving a trace. The loss of no other vessel—for it was the first of the great passenger ships to go—has caused so great an excitement. How those at home clung to hope, some of them for years—for the notion of the crew being wrecked on some out of the way island was eagerly adopted—and how many a heart was broken by the intolerable suspense! At last it was generally concluded that the ship had collided with an iceberg and foundered. And now comes this terrible story, which, it is fortunate, was not conceived of when it would have had the power to make those at home more miserable.

It is not to be forgotten, however, that more than one story has been recently written upon this subject—the capture and scuttling of a passenger steamer—and it seems more likely that they have suggested the idea being adapted to the loss of the President than that a solitary pirate should have revealed such a long kept secret of the seas.—London News.

Mystified by an Abbreviation.

Among the stories told about the experiences of police telegraph operators by the attaches of the electrical bureau is one which relates to an ex-special officer, who is now a regular operator at a substation up town. While acting as "sub" in a West Philadelphia district he received a call from the central, which he promptly wrote on his slate as he received it. At the close of the message he found that it read: "Send wagon to Phil. Ahosp. and learn condition of Hen. Coop." He was completely stalled. He could not imagine who Phil. Ahosp was, nor where he was to be found, nor what particular hencoop the central was interested in. He felt that there was a mistake somewhere, but was satisfied that it must be at the other end of the wire. As the hour was near relieving time, he decided to wait and consult his relief before sending the wagon on a wild goose chase or asking the central to repeat. On the arrival of his relief he was informed that the operator who had sent the message generally abbreviated his messages, and probably the one received would read: "Send wagon to Philadelphia hospital and learn condition of Henry Cooper." This proved to be the proper solution.—Philadelphia Record.

Poor Woodcock—Poor Soul!

Some years ago a woodcock, tired and weary with his long journey, fell exhausted down from midair right into the middle of London. Nearly all birds migrate at night, so it was dark, as, half stunned, he found himself lying in Albemarle street. A woodcock's first impulse is always to hide himself, to steal under something, to crouch down. In nature wild he would choose some bracken or some low shrub. Holly he particularly loves, and there he would nestle down and doze the hours away, but here, poor bird, in rural Piccadilly, he could find none of these, and so he finally nestled up to a lamppost, and, stunned and stupefied, he fell asleep and was so found by the early milkman on the next day.—Critic.

Peter the Great.

Peter the Great of Russia had the typical face of a Russian peasant. A short, thick nose, with large nostrils, heavy brows, full, sensual lips, wide mouth and high cheek bones were among his most prominent features. His head was almost round and showed by its width at the ears that combativeness of disposition that was one of the leading points in his character.

What the Boston Man Said.

"Believe me, dear, I love you more than life. I swear by the honor of my ancestors, by my hopes of happiness, by the sacred cod"—

"Ah, Harold! Now indeed I believe you!"—New York Recorder.

GRAIN AND PROVIS ONS.

Wheat Closed Lower — Corn and Oats Higher—Pork Products Dull, but Closed at an Advance.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, July 3.—The market for wheat to day was a dead one. Some of the members took occasion to anticipate Independence Day by exploding giant crackers on the floor, for which offense against the law several were suspended for from fifteen to thirty days. Trading was very light and insignificant. Prices opened lower and standing in that position all day, with a slight recovery from the extreme inside taking place before the close. September wheat opened from 71⅛c, 71⅜c to 71⅝; sold between 71⅝c to 70⅞c, closing at 71⅛c to 71¼c, 5⁄8c to ¾c under yesterday. Cash wheat was quiet and steady at unchanged prices.

Corn business was slack in the corn market. It was a holiday market in spirit and action. The early trading was at easy prices in sympathy with the tone ruling in wheat. Later in the day a rally took place, a few "shorts" showing a disposition to clean up their trades preparatory to recess and being obliged to bid a little before they were able to obtain the necessary property. September corn opened at 46c, sold between 46¼ to 46⅝c. and 45⅝c, closing at 46¼ to 46⅝c —⅛ to ¼c higher than yesterday. Cash corn was ¼ to ½c. higher than yesterday.

Oats—Yesterday's best seller of oats was paying top prices for May at the opening to-day. The feeling was firm at the start, but afterwards a weaker feeling was shown, the decline in wheat and corn influencing trading. Afterwards another slight bulge occurred and the close was quiet and firm, with September ¼@¼c higher than yesterday. Some of the elevator concerns were buyers of July oats early. Cash oats were ¼@½c per bushel higher.

Provisions—Very little activity was seen in product. The sentiment was in favor of higher prices, but the business was so light that they moved sluggishly. A higher hog market was the cause of strength at the openiong, after which a moderate decline took place, through sympathy with grain. A fairly steady feeling was in possession of the market at the close. September pork closed 2½c higher than yesterday, September lard 2½c higher and September ribs 5@ 7½c higher.

SPOTS AND FUTURES

New York Sun's Review of the Cotton Market.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Sun says: Cotton rose six to seven points, but lost this and declined two points, closing easy with sales 173,500 bales. Liverpool advanced 1-32d on the spot, with sales of 8,000 bales. Futures advanced four points then lost two and a half points of this and finally closed barely steady at a net advance for the day of one and a half to two points. In Manchester yarns were dearer, but buyers refused to go on; cloths were quiet. New Orleans advanced five points, but lost this and declined four to seven points. Port receipts were 198 bales, against 1,177 this day last week and 1,560 last year. Spot prices advanced 1-16c at New York, Mobile and Norfolk, with sales here of 797 bales for spinners.

To-day's features: The Government states that too much rain has fallen during the past week over portions of the Gulf States and Northern Texas. The daily report of the rain fall showed continued heavy rains in the region mentioned, and this fact together with an advance in Liverpool, and a better spot market here caused an advance in futures, but on the rise heavy Southern orders to sell were encountered, and the market reacted and closed at a small decline. Still it was a half holiday market and many operators evened up their transactions. Many of the advices from the South as given in the weekly Government report were favorable. Liverpool lost part of its early advance, New Orleans weakened and not a few were surprised to find that New Orleans was selling freely here. Liverpool bought and there was also some Southern as well as local covering.

FITZSIMMONS ACQUITTED.

The Jury Found That He Was Not Responsible for the Death of Con. Riordan.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 3.—Bob. Fitzsimmons, the well known pugilist, who has been on trial here for a week past on the charge of being responsible for the death of his late sparring partner, Con. Riordan, is free. Shortly after 8 o'clock to-night the jury filed in before a crowded court room, and after they had answered to their names their foreman announced the verdict, "not guilty." Immediately a tremendous cheer went up. Such a boisterous demonstration has not been seen in the Onondaga county court house in many years.

THE WHISKEY TRUST

WINS THE FIGHT IN THE CHICAGO COURTS

Against the Greenhut-Morris Interest — A Sale of the Properties Ordered by the Court.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, July 3.—After a long and arduous campaign, each battle of which has been hotly contested, the Re-organization Committee of the Whiskey Trust this afternoon practically reached the end of its work and scored a final victory over the Greenhut-Morris interests, which have been vigorously contested. The consideration of the order for a judicial sale, which has been in progress two days, was finished and all its points agreed upon. Judge Showalter said he would sign the order as soan as a clean printed copy of it as amended, was submitted to him. This will probably be done next Friday. The sale will be ordered to take place by auction in Cook county, and the price of $9,800,000, offered by the Reorganization Committee, will be considered an upset price. A deposit of $100,000 cash will be required, to be forfeited in case the company failed to run the distilleries and keep them in repair. As security the stockholders and creditors will have a lien on the whole property, and the Court will be empowered besides, to take back the property if it finds it is being wasted.

The war between the two factions of the Trust has been waged since Jan. 28th, when Greenhut was appointed receiver, only to be deposed a few days later by order of the Conrt. The decisive engagement to-day was a bitter one, the attorneys of Mr. Greenhut trying hard to be made parties of record; they will have the right of appeal. Their petition to this effect was denied by the Conrt yesterday, but they renewed it today in a more formal manner and insisted on being recognized.

Attorneys Walker and Eddy, representing the minority stockholders, told the court they did not think their clients were getting justice in being denied the right to come in as parties of record, if not as defendants and then as co-complainants in the original cause. Mr. Walker said he hoped the court would not continue to the end to submit to the dictates of counsel for the Reorganization Committee.

In reply to the insinuations that the Court was partial, ex-Judge Moran declared that it was outrageous that Greenhut and Morris should longer be permitted to obstruct the business of the Court, and still more outrageous that counsel should attempt to coerce the Court into granting them the right to stop the work of reorganization by taking an appeal, which would require at least two years to decide.

Mr. Walker made a sarcastic attack on the receiver, and moved that his report be referred to a master in chancery for examination. He insisted that the whole property be sold, instead of the cream of it, as was now proposed, and intimated that if this were done the Greenhut-Morris interests might be a bidder for it.

It developed in the course of the discussion that the Reorganization Committee now has about $3,500,000 to carry on its new business. Under the terms of giving stock as part payment, only $70,000 cash would have been required, but this will not now be paid in.

BAXTER SHEMWELL

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHARLOTTE, N, C., June 3.—The trial of Baxter Shemwell for the murder of Dr. R. L. Payne, Sr., in Lexington, N. C., is one of the most important ever held in North Carolina, owing to the prominence of the parties to the affair. The killing occurred on February 25th. Shemwell was instrumental in the removal of Dr. Payne as an insurance examiner. This led to a difficulty in the morning, at the beginning of which Dr. Payne advised peace making, but which wound up by pistols being drawn and shots fired. No one was hurt, and the parties were tried before a magistrate and bound over to court. After the trial, the Payne's, father and son, were walking home, when Shemwell followed, and as they faced around, on becoming aware of his presence, he shot old Dr. Payne in the right breast. All three men clinched and fell over in the street. Dr. Payne, the elder, was taken up and stretched out on the pavement, and in fifteen minutes was dead. Shemwell is a hot-blooded man, and has been in several shooting scrapes before.

Three witnesses testified for the State. Dr. L. C. Carrico said that he was called to attend Frederick Farrell on the night of December 16th, 1894. The man was suffering with convulsions, which the doctor diagnosed as the result of poison, and treated him accordingly. Farrell died the next morning in one of the convulsions.

J. E. Joy, an undertaker, visited Farrell the night before he died, and overheard Mr. Farrell ask his wife if there was any strychnine in the medicine she had administered.

Dr. E. M. Shaeffer, of Washington, testified that strychnine was found in the stomach of the dead man when the autopsy was performed.

To-day the counsel on both sides have been privately examining their witnesses. The jury will be drawn to-morrow and the trial will begin in earnest Friday.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY

Reported to Have Laid Plans For Absorption of the Seaboard Air Line.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Morning Journal says: Reports from Baltimore yesterday had it that the Southern Railway has laid its plans for the absorption of the Seaboard Air Line. The reports in this city were met with a statement from Charles H. Coster, chairman of the Richmond Terminal Reorganization Committee, to the effect that he knew nothing of them. Generally the report is not believed.

Such a move on the part of the Southern Railway just now would give it a monopoly of the southeastern trade, especially the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, where the Seaboard Air Line is at present its only dangerous competitor.

The laws of Georgia would be perhaps the greatest stumbling block in the way of such a movement, as once before, when the Southern, then the Richmond Terminal, scooped every road in the State, it was compelled to release one, the Western & Atlantic, to allow the competition provided for by statue.

NORFOLK, Va., July 3.—Mr. St. John, Vice-President of the Seaboard Air Line, is in Baltimore. While nobody here has authority to speak for the company in reference to the story from New York as to the absorption of the Seaboard Air Line by the Southern Railway Company, the Seaboard Company is said to be watching with a jealous eye the movements of the Southern.

Prince Bismarck was much better yesterday morning, and is in no respect in a dangerous or even a serious condition, is what a telegram from Friederichsrue says.

A SENSATIONAL CASE.

A Handsome Young Woman—One Hundred Witnesses Summoned—The Trial Likely to Continue Several Days.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

LA PLATTE, Md., June 3.—The trial of Mrs. Belle Farrell, charged with the murder of her husband, Frederick Farrell, on December 17th last, was begun here to-day before the special term of the Circuit Court of Charles county. The town has been thronged with people since Monday morning when the work of selecting a jury was commenced. As the case has excited much general interest and discussion there was great difficulty in securing the jury, many declaring that they had formed unalterable opinions as to the innocence or guilt of the accused.

Mrs. Farrell, who is a handsome woman of 28 years, is accused of murdering her husband, a crippled hotel keeper 52 years old, by strychnine poisoning, the presumed motive being her infatuation for a younger man, Eugene Hall, a railroad brakeman.

The woman disappeared about the time her husband's remains were disinterred last winter, but surrenderrd about ten days ago.

She is scarcely treated like a prisoner charged with mutder. Her nights are spent at Sheriff Albrittain's house, and she dines at the hotel, where every courtesy is shown her. She has the sympathy of the majority of the residents of this town, but not because of any belief in her innocence, for there are few who go so far in their declarations. Her personal attractiveness has no doubt contributed to this feeling, and truly the sight of a pretty young widow and her bright baby boy is enough to shake the damaging testimony brought out by the coroner's inquest.

One hundred witnesses have been summoned, and the trial is likely to continue some days. Some of the most important testimony will be given by Washington, D. C, chemists and physicians who held an autopsy over Mr. Farrell's remains. Mrs. Farrell was formerly a resident of Washington.

State's attorney Matthews opened the case of the prosecution to-day and the defense reserved its statement.

CORBETT-FITZSIMMONS.

A Set-Back to the Projectors of the Fight in Dallas, Texas.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

AUSTIN, July 3.—The State Comptroller yesterday gave the projectors of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons contest in Dallas a set-back. In a letter to the tax collector of Dallas, he says:

"After careful examination and consideration of the question presented, I have come to the conclusion that while the act of 1889 provided for an occupation tax of $500 for every fight between man and man, the Legislature of this State has by subsequent enactment made it unlawful for any person to voluntarily engage in a pugilistic encounter for money.

"That the effect of said act was to repeal so much of the act of 1889 as permitted an occupation tax to be charged for fights between man and man has been decided by our Court of Criminal Appeals. You are, therefore, respectfully advised that this department will not attempt to legalize the proposed pugilistic encounter in this State by the issuance of a license therefor, or by authorizing you, as tax collector of Dallas county, to receive any sum of money from any person as a license tax for such performance, when the same is manifestly unlawful, and has been so expressly declared by the people of Texas through the Legislature." County Judge Ross pounded with his gavel in vain for order, and finally commanded the sheriff and his deputies to put everybody under arrest. This had the effect of quieting the crowd, and inasmuch as the order was not carried out everybody went away happy. On account of the verdict the Fourth of July demonstration seems to start in early, for Bob Fitzsimmons' friends are celebrating in the good old-fashioned way. The summing up of attorney Frederick House, of New York, for the defence was an eloquent effort, and it took the jury but a short time to arrive at the verdict of acquittal.

FIRE AT LYNN, MASS.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

LYNN, July 3.—At 10.50 this evening there was an explosion of fireworks in front of the L. A. May Co's store in the Sagamore hotel block, corner of Union and Mulberry streets, at the temporary counter erected outside the store on the sidewalk. Immediately the whole mass of fireworks was a blaze, and the fusilade of exploding rockets, canon crackers, bombs, etc., startled everybody in Central square. A. B. Stimson, who was in charge of the fireworks' counter, was knocked against the glass front ot the building, but not injured. The flames which had now started, communicated to the store of the L. A. May Company, and spread with alarming rapidity. The firemen did not get the alarm right and for nearly fifteen minutes the flames had everything their own way. A general alarm was finally sounded. Half an hour after the fireworks exploded the entire block, which is four stories, of brick, about 100 feet front on Union street and more than that in depth, was a mass of flames. At 12 o'clock the fire was under control and confined to the Sagamore hotel block. It is thought that everybody escaped from the building with possibly one exception, an old man named James H. Winslow, who had not been accounted for as yet. The loss is about $100,000.

All the County Records Destroyed by an Incendiary Fire.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star

ST LOUIS, June 3.—A special to the Chronicle from Lexington, Tenn., says the court house, Mayor's office, and all the county records were destroyed by incendiary fire early this morning. An investigation of alleged forgeries of county grants was under way and it is believed that the fire was started by interested parties. There was no insurance on either building or contents.

THE WEATHER BUREAU.

Professor Willis L. Moore, of Chicago, the New Chief—One of the Best Forecasters in the Service.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Prof. Willis L. Moore, of Chicago, who has been recommended by Secretary Morton as the new chief of the Weather Bureau, is regarded as one of the best forecasters in the service, and has a reputation for accuracy second to none in the Department. He first came to the notice of Secretary Morton about a year ago, when the Secretary began a thorough investigation of the work being done by the Weather Bureau with the end in view of materially improving that service and causing it to issue practical information for the farmer, merchant and sailor and every other line of business in which the condition of the weather and the approach of storms had anything to do.

Circulars were issued to the better class of local forecasters asking for essays on the practical forecasting of the Weather Bureau. Abont thirty of them replied. These essays, numbered, but with their author's names unknown, were turned over to a board consisting of Chief Harrington, Prof. Mendenhall and Major Dunwoody. This board selected the best of the essays, less than ten, and the writers were ordered to Washington to make reports. This was done for a month, and Moore, receiving the highest percentage, almost 100, was given the position of Professor of Meteorology at a salary of $3,500. He was, prior to this, local forecaster at Milwaukee, but after his promotion was transferred to Chicago. Last winter he made a wonderful record considering the character of the weather There were numerous coid waves during that season, some of them of unusual severity, and it was his marvelous accuracy in predicting their coming that attracted the attention of Secretary Morton.

One thing that pleased the Secretary was Moore's fashion of making statements about which there could be no doubt. He avoided all ambiguous predictions and risked a positive statement, or frankly said in his report that it was impossible to accurately judge the forthcoming conditions, and followed this with the best judgment he could command. He rarely missed the mark, and his reports were the best made in that very trying kind of weather. In politics Mr. Moore is said to be a Republican. He is about forty years of age and has grown up in the service.

AFFAIRS IN CUBA.

The Harbor of Havana Barricaded—The Town of Jarito Occupied by Insurgents —Steamer George W. Childs at Key West, Florida.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

JACKSONVILLE, July 3.—A cablegram to the Times-Union from Key West, Fla., says:

Passengers by the steamship Mascotte to-night report that the Spanish Government has issued orders to build a pontoon bridge across the entrance to the harbor of Havana and that no vessel will be allowed to enter or leave the harbor between sunset and sunrise, and that every vessel must be thoroughly searched before entering and leaving, and that no vessel will be allowed to carry mail except that which goes through the postoffice.

The Times-Union correspondent is also informed that the insurgents are occupying the town of Jarito and were bombarded by a Spanish gunboat with little effect. Gen. Salecado has had an engagement with insurgents under Maseo and routed them with considerable loss.

Among the Cuban passengers tonight was Dr. Menocal, the famous physician, who has been exiled by the Spanish authorities.

The steamer George W. Childs, about which there has been so much speculation and mystery for the past several weeks, arrived in this port this morning from Kingston, Jamaica, via San Domingo, and has been ordered to quarantine at Tortugas, with an inspector of customs in charge, but will take on stores and coal before proceeding to said port. The captain says that they met with very heavy weather since leaving this port, on June 8th. All her upper works were braced down. The captain reports that her engines are out of order and all shifted, and will have to be repaired before proceding to sea. She will return to this port after five days quarantine. It is reported in the city that one, Carlos Hernandez, agent of the Cuban revolutionary party, is on board in the capacity of purser, but investigation failed to confirm this report.

I have analyzed the Tivoli Hofbrau Beer, manufactured by the Robert Portner Brewing Company, of Alexandria, Va., and find that it is pure and, in all respects, of excellent quality. It is unexceptionable as a beverage, and I recommend it especially for medicinal use.

Things We Understand,

And Things We Do Not Understand.

The Depositor in the

Wilmington Savings and Trust Company

Does not understand how the decline in price of silver since 1873 caused the price of cotton to decline, when the price of cotton declined more rapidly for several years before '73 (when silver did not decline materially) than after '73, and was lower several years before the war than at present, though silver was twice as high at that time as it is at present. The same depositor does understand that his money in the draws interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, compounded quarterly. He is therefore provided with a good Umbrella when the "rainy day" comes.

—THE—

Wilmington Savings and Trust Company,

Has the largest capital of any strictly Savings Bank in North Carolina, and is fortified with a good percentage of surplus for the protection of depositors. This Bank invites investigation, and wishes to see every mechanic, wage-earner, salaried man and all others, keep a Savings Bank account and save something each week June 5 tf
